

The Grange Newsletter

Grange Association

September 2026

ISSUE No. 146

A true Grange Pioneer

www.grangeassociation.org

Registered Scottish Charity SC025491

From the Editor

From potholes to pavements, and now half of the Grange seems to be under traffic restrictions as major electrical works begin. It has been a dry and windy Summer, but there are heat-related reasons to be grateful for Scottish weather! The fire on Arthur's Seat (for the second year running) was a reminder of the fragility of our environment.

Issue 145 profiled Lorn Cowie, and I was delighted to attend his 100th birthday on June 1st. There were speeches, sandwiches and champagne and family warmth to defy the chilly air. Thanks to this Newsletter, Lorn was re-united with an old friend, Jim Scott, now a neighbour on Grange Loan, but who was blissfully ignorant that his old fishing buddy was living across the street. What a wonderful coincidence! Rugby Scotland attended and took the photo.

This issue is heavy on history, but alive with a campaigning spirit. Maggie Collard has reached the end of her house's stories, but what a great way to end. Catherine Booth's profile of Winifred Rushforth reminds us that inspiring people are all around us in the Grange. More Grange Lives will feature in the newsletter, so feel free to nominate!

Andrew Freeman

CONTENTS

Pavements for all

Page 2

Grange Secrets and the Arctic Star Medal

Page 3-4

Garden Notes

Page 5

Grange Lives: Winifred Rushforth

Pages 6-7

Grange Trees

Page 8

Planning Update

Page 9

Grange Talks

Page 10

Events, Useful Contacts, Ads

Page 11

GRANGE ASSOCIATION CONTACTS

Office holders

John Elliot

Alison Wood

Lynda Hay

David McCraw

Committee members

Maggie Collard

Lynn Errey

Brian Hosie

Molly Ludlam

Peter Pitkin

Audrey O'Brien

Andrew Freeman

Other roles

John Hossack (Co-opted member)

Neil Robb

Mark Batho

Lucy Richardson

Chair

chair@grangeassociation.org

Vice-chair & Leaf Clearing

Alison.wood@grangeassociation.org

Secretary & events monitoring

secretary@grangeassociation.org

events@grangeassociation.org

Treasurer & Newsletter Advertising

treasurer@grangeassociation.org

Grange Fair

maggie.collard@grangeassociation.org

Garden Group

gardens@grangeassociation.org

Membership

membership@grangeassociation.org

Home Energy

home-energy@grangeassociation.org

Tree Advice

trees@grangeassocation.org

Communications

communications@grangeassociation.org

Newsletter Editor

andrew.freeman@grangeassociation.org

Planning

planning@grangeassociation.org

Online and web services

website@grangeassociation.org

Grange Talks Programme

mark.batho@grangeassociation.org

Newsletter distribution

lucyclarerichardson@yahoo.co.uk

To advertise in The Grange Newsletter,

contact David McCraw, Treasurer

Email: treasurer@grangeassociation.org

Newsletter contributions to Andrew Freeman, Editor

Email: andrew.freeman@grangeassociation.org

Pavements/Movements

Moving around the Grange it's impossible not to notice certain things. Potholes have been one issue, and it is encouraging to see some efforts, however apparently slap-dash, being made to deal with the worst of them. Over-hanging hedges and bushes are another, a hazard for those with poor sight or balance. Less easy to spot are the dangers represented by our pavements. Until you trip or fall, you learn to navigate locally. But look a little wider, and look past the lush growths of weeds and plants everywhere, and it's clear that the general state of our area's footways is very mixed. Some pavements are clearly dangerous.

The Committee of the Grange Association has been discussing this issue for a few months, but we think now is the time to address it in a systematic and qualitative manner.

As Chair, I was asked to give some more detail to the July meeting of the Committee. This led to some interesting, and not always encouraging, research. The criteria for the quality of pavements differs for new builds and existing dwellings. For new builds, the government requires that pavements be hard, firm, even and slip-resistant. For existing, pavements are assessed on the basis of the risk they present to the public. In Edinburgh, there is no single standard that every pavement must always meet. The Council is required to maintain the pavements so that they are reasonably safe for public use, using a risk-based approach.

Of course, it turns out, there is a national UK code. It recommends that authorities:

- inspect footways according to their importance
- assess defects using risk rather than fixed dimensions
- prioritise based on likelihood and consequence of harm

Edinburgh has its own risk-based Road Asset Safety Inspection Policy. For maintenance purposes, footways are classified into six categories:

1. Prestige walking zones
2. Primary walking routes
3. Secondary walking routes
4. Link footways
5. Local access footways
6. Minor footways

Inspection frequency and repair priorities depend on the category and assessed risk rather than simply defect size. Factors include pedestrian volumes, vulnerable users, accident history, and proximity to schools.

In terms of actual work ("defect intervention"), the UK code recommends that authorities use risk assessment, for example a 20mm trip threshold.

Edinburgh inspectors consider:

- defect size • location • pedestrian usage • visibility
- likely users • surrounding hazards

before deciding the repair priority. As an example, the pavement on Lauder Road extending about 50 yards from the Lauder Loan entrance to the south has been categorised as a 4 priority (the most urgent). It is therefore regrettable that, despite instructions having been issued to a contractor on 1st September 2025, nothing has yet been done.

Walking forward

I suggest that we survey the Grange and draw up a simple traffic-light style scheme. For example, Red for very poor pavements, Orange for poor ones that will require attention in the medium term and Green for acceptable. The pavement on Lauder Road, for example, I categorise as Red, as the photo suggests!

This will require building a database of our assessments, but after that effort we can make submissions to the Council (and Councillors) and also make this information available to our members so that they can lobby at will. We would monitor the results and report regularly to the Council and the membership. I would welcome volunteers to help, so please be in contact by email if you are interested.

John Elliot

Grange Secrets

Hidden behind a shutter in the study of my home at 22 Fountainhall Road is a poignant relic: an old imperial height measure. During its useful life between 1960 and 1986 it tapped many heads and witnessed many intense discussions.

A few weeks ago, my doorbell rang and I was delighted to greet a former resident with a unique connection to house and measure. Susie Malloch Martin was a teenager when her parents, and younger brother, Peter, moved in, converting the public rooms downstairs into her father's General Practice.

Local hero

A few readers may still remember Dr George Clark Malloch. However, they may have known little about the life of their charismatic GP. George Malloch, grandson of a headmaster at Juniper Green school, was born in Morningside on 22 July 1916. He attended James Gillespie's primary then George Watsons, excelling at sports, particularly rugby and middle-distance running.

He entered Edinburgh Medical School where, carol singing under the glow of a streetlamp, he and nursing student Eileen Littlewood first locked eyes. They married on 19 January 1943. George had already enlisted as a Surgeon Lieutenant in the Royal Naval Volunteer Regiment. He served with the Russian convoys of the North Atlantic Fleet (see Box on next page).

Like many men of his generation, George never spoke of wartime trauma, but his situation was both perilous and crucial, protecting vital supply lines, so particularly vulnerable to attack. As a ship's surgeon, he experienced horrors, but only ever referenced the 'absolute hell' of war. He preferred humorous anecdotes, including accepting a challenge to swim under the keel of his moored ship, HMS Milne, which nearly ended in disaster. Reaching the lowest point only demonstrated how much further there was to go. Having resurfaced, he realised that any attempt to climb back on board would attract the unwelcome attention of his own lookouts. In the end, a narrow escape ensued.

A photograph of King George VI inspecting the same ship conveys both Malloch's youth and stoicism, in sharp contrast to a joyous wedding day photograph.

Respected and loved

After demobilisation, he returned to Edinburgh - where both children were born - before becoming an assistant in General Practice in Armadale. In West Lothian Dr Malloch formed a strong bond with the community which led to numerous public appearances. Covered in the local press, one thread linking each of these is thoughtfulness.

At a primary school prize giving in July 1951, Dr. Malloch, told a story ...[containing] the moral that, even if ...not...a prize winner, they have ... some useful knowledge ... which others do not possess, and he urged the prize-winners ...not to rest on their laurels, but to strive more and more for knowledge. His drive to connect with the whole of his young audience, encouraging both winners and non-winners, speaks of his genuine wish to foster confidence and aspiration.

Grange Secrets

Many parts and hearts

Another of his talents was revealed in 1953, when TV sets were first installed in the Tippethill hospital. Once again, Dr Malloch spoke to patients, staff and fundraisers who eagerly anticipated 8.00pm when programmes started. To pass the time beforehand, ...Dr Malloch ... [sat] down at the piano ... leading the company in community singing.

No wonder, when he relocated to Hastings, the West Lothian Courier reported on a petition signed by ...Half the population of Armadale, highlighting, ...profound regret of the resignation ...of Dr. George Malloch...[who] has earned the confidence and esteem ...for his high professional skill and personal character...

In 1957, the lure of Edinburgh's schools drew the family back from Hastings to the Grange. Standing in the kitchen at number 22, Susie recalled her mother's dedication and forbearance managing the antiquated equipment in the scullery of their unheated house.

During their tenure of number 22, stones from the demolition of Fountainhall Road Church created steps and borders. As I write this and glance out at the magnolia bursting into flower, I think of George and Eileen who planted it in the 1960s - it symbolises a lengthy partnership devoted to caring for Grange residents. And when I see the height measure hidden behind the shutter I wonder whether the next residents of the house, and the ones after that, will recall its significance.

Maggie Collard

The Arctic Star

The convoys between Britain and Russia from 1941-45 were among the most notorious and hazardous arenas in all of World War Two. Ships were under threat not just from U-boat attacks, but also from extreme weather. Survivors recalled freezing conditions that were dangerous to the equipment, requiring men to chip ice from cables and fixtures at great risk to themselves from frostbite and hypothermia. Bravery and stoicism were required in equal measures. More than 3,000 men died, many more were traumatized.

It was a mystery, then, that for decades the convoys went unrecognized as a theatre deserving its own service medal. Families and relatives became increasingly angry and lobbied successive governments, to no avail until 2013 when the Arctic Star was finally commissioned. Prime Minister David Cameron announced the creation of the medal in December 2012, and the first 40 were awarded the following March. Families can still apply today.

Garden Notes

Hello all. First up, a shout out to two members who responded to my invitation to share a loved plant from their gardens. Alison sent a picture of her favourite irises, Michael of his magnificent rhododendrons in bloom. Who else wants to share some garden joy? We may need this after a very challenging hot dry summer. Perennials that looked sprightly in my May /June garden ended straggly and wan in July, even after a "Chelsea chop". My shade-loving plants such as astilbes, and hellebores, fresh and ebullient in June, turned into shrivelled little heaps, even after a "Hampton Hack". What to do? Buy more for dry shade? Dig up, chuck out, replant? Growing plants in this climate a bit of a curate's egg, and never a sure thing. Love to hear your views on how to plant for increasing heat.

Of course, the summer also brought delights. In May, our members, as generous and faithful as ever, contributed plants and labour to make our Plant Stall at the Grange fair as profitable as ever. You know who you are, and many charities will benefit from your broad backs and green thumbs!

In July, our annual gardens group outing had a brilliant day in Fife. We enjoyed the contrasting impressions of Old Inzievar House with its opulent walled garden, and Kirklands with its precipitous river terraces, both featuring in <https://scotlandsgardens.org/>. After a near crisis when a previously booked garden cancelled at short notice, the last-minute switch led to a very happy ending!

Our volunteer guerilla gardening group (more compliments than ever on Lovers Loan) are extending their remit to an erstwhile neglected patch in Grange Loan near the Astley Ainslie entrance. Submitting to the steadfast persuasion of Lucy Richardson, the council have even put a bench there! So, watch this space for invitations to shrub and bulb planting on this site in the autumn.

Finally, advance notice of a seed sharing session at Newington Library in October. Let me know if you are interested.

Lynn Errey

The Avenue Store
36 Blackford Avenue
EH9 2PP
0131 668 3274

WE ARE OPEN 7 DAYS
from 6.30am until 8pm

We Offer a FULL Grocery Range which includes Instore Bakery, Chilled & Frozen
Foods, Newspapers & Magazines
PLUS...

A Great Range of Wines, Beers & Spirits
at Great Prices!

WE CAN ALSO OFFER YOU FREE HOME DELIVERY

www.avenuestore.co.uk
for details and offers

Grange Lives: Winifred Rushforth

Perchance to dream

Margaret Winifred Bartholomew was born in 1885 to a farming family at Duntarvie, West Lothian. Her father's sister Isabella (1856-1936), married name Mears, was one of the first women to qualify as a doctor in Britain and had worked as a missionary in China, taking a deep interest in Chinese religion, philosophy and spirituality. She later ran Woodburn Sanatorium in Canaan Lane as a centre for the treatment of tuberculosis. She was a significant inspiration in Winifred's life.

From 1895 to 1903, Winifred attended Edinburgh Ladies' College in Queen St, Edinburgh. She went on to study medicine at Edinburgh Medical College for Women, which had been founded by Elsie Inglis and others, graduating M.B.Ch.B. in 1908. After graduation, Winifred worked in Dundee as an Assistant in General Practice to Dr Emily Thomson, who also worked closely with Dr Alice Moorhead, another early female physician.

To India and back

Even though more women doctors were qualifying, it was difficult for them to get jobs in British hospitals, so many went as medical missionaries to countries such as India and China. In 1909 Winifred did just that, taking up a 5-year posting in the Mure Mission Hospital for Women, in Nagpur, India, where her work was in surgery and midwifery. There she met her future husband, Frank Rushforth, a Cambridge graduate in mathematics who was working as a financial civil servant. Subsequently he was posted elsewhere in India, and they kept in touch by letter.

In October 1914, she finished her service and returned to Scotland to run her brother George's medical practice in Midcalder. But this interlude was brief. In November 1915 she returned to India where she and Frank were married. Winifred went to work in the Mission Hospital in Jalna. She carried out surgical work and inoculations against bubonic plague and cholera. By the time the war was over she had three small children all of whom spoke Hindi but no English.

Her fourth child was born in 1924, and from that year, the older children were sent to school back in Scotland. Between 1914-1929 Winifred made 14 voyages by ship between the UK and India, wanting to be in Scotland for the children's summer holidays. Around the same time, she became interested in psychology, a discipline almost unknown at the time, and she decided to specialise in this field.

In 1929 Winifred and Frank returned home from India permanently. Winifred came back first, and while the children were at boarding schools in England she spent a year working at the Tavistock Clinic in London. Dr Hugh Crichton-Miller had treated shell shock victims during the First World War, and started to use similar techniques to treat patients with nervous disorders. Winifred worked under him, training in psychoanalysis and seeing patients under supervision. The family moved back to Scotland in 1930, and settled in Edinburgh, living near Holy Corner. Frank was appointed as Registrar at Edinburgh College of Art, but sadly died in 1945.

Winifred continued with psychoanalysis, and in 1933 started a private practice as an analytical psycho-therapist, an almost unknown profession in Scotland. Heavily influenced by Freud and Carl Jung, she became well-known in this field. Her manual on child-rearing for mothers, The outstretched finger, was published that year. It stressed the need to consider the emotional and psychological needs of a child, at a time when a more authoritarian method of parenting was the norm.

A fitting memorial

Photo credit: Womenofscotland.org.uk

Grange Lives: Winifred Rushforth

Winifred became aware of the need for treatment of neurotic illness, especially for people who could not afford to pay for it. She was particularly committed to the provision of care for children and young people with mental health problems. In 1939, just after war broke out, she enlisted the support of a small group of professionals with teaching or other qualifications. This gave her the means to found the Davidson Clinic, named after the church in Eyre Place. In different premises in Edinburgh and Glasgow over the years - Edinburgh locations being 4 Fettes Row, 26 Chalmers Street, 58 Dalkeith Road, and 18 Hartington Place - it ran from early 1940 until June 1973. Jewish refugee psychiatrists who had arrived in Scotland were early recruits to the staff. One of them, Dr. William Kraemer, joined her in 1941 and they worked together for 16 years establishing the Clinic.

The Clinic took an holistic approach to treatment, and, when young people were involved, looked at their family situation, working closely with parents and teachers. Strong emphasis was placed on home background – were children living in decent housing conditions and did they have sufficient food and sleep? The clinicians believed they could treat the behavioural problems of young people better than the law would or could.

Life of the mind

With Winifred as its Honorary Medical Director, the Clinic flourished and gained considerable renown. At one time as many as 100 patients were being treated daily. People paid what they could afford. Fundraising by appeals and flag days supplemented fees. Winifred regularly ran courses, gave talks and made radio broadcasts. Eventually, however, the Clinic was forced to close. It had become impossible to attract and retain qualified staff.

In 1968, Winifred was awarded an OBE in recognition of her work. She continued practising as a psychotherapist, working with individual patients but also with groups. Sessions were run at her home at 11 Lauder Road, where she lived until her death.

Winifred was also instrumental in establishing the Salisbury Centre, Edinburgh, opened in 1973, first as a Sufi meditation centre, then as a meeting place for spiritual seekers of all kinds. Her philosophy continued in Wellspring, opened in Edinburgh in 1978 as a psycho-therapeutic and counselling centre for individuals and groups, and run for a time by Winifred's daughter, Dr Diana Bates. Winifred was also the founder of the still active Sempervivum Trust, which runs residential weeks, open to all, to allow people to gather and work together in creative and meditative ways.

A remarkable and insightful portrait of Winifred held in the National Gallery of Scotland, was painted in 1982 by the artist Victoria Crowe. Included in the painting is a statuette of a bushman of the Kalahari. As the Bushman's 'song from the soul' rises, Winifred is shown listening, her empathy and intelligence made plain. The statuette was a prized possession, kept in her home (see cover photo).

Winifred remained extremely active. At the age of 95, she published Something is happening: spiritual awareness and depth psychology in the new age (1981). She died at her home in The Grange on 29 August 1983.

At her Memorial Service in Old St Paul's Church, some of her young friends softly sang one of the Greenham Common songs - "You can't kill the spirit, She is like a mountain, Old and strong, She goes on and on and on." Her close friend Sir Laurens van der Post attended as Prince Charles's representative. Earlier the same year, the then Prince and Princess of Wales had visited Winifred in her home, talking at length about spirituality and dreams. Her autobiography, Ten decades of happenings, was published posthumously in 1984.

A superb and moving sculpture stands in her memory in George Square Gardens. Highly recommended.

Catherine Booth

© Victoria Crowe. Image credit: Museums & Galleries
Edinburgh – City of Edinburgh Council

Grange Trees

A recent Saturday Guardian's 'Young Country Diary' was written by Kearyn and Adrianna, both aged 13, pupils at the Royal Blind School on Canaan Lane. They described making a den in the Astley Ainslie grounds which involved suspending a sheet of tarpaulin on a rope tied between two trees. They wrote eloquently about the sounds and smells of the woods, giving a new perspective to a walk through a familiar site.

The reference to tarpaulin jogged my memory. In May I was asked for an opinion about a yew tree growing just outside the conservation area that appeared to be struggling. It is attractive and a significant feature in the layout of a small group of flats and houses. It was surrounded by a wide circle of large pebbles, under which there was a sheet of tarpaulin covering the tree's main root system.

Yew trees are long-lived and appear to be resistant to the notorious honey fungus. But they are susceptible to other root-borne pathogenic fungi and can also be killed by waterlogging, drought or the alteration of soil levels during building operations. On the tree in question there were bare twigs and some yellowing needles. Although the evidence is circumstantial, these features may be linked to the tarpaulin, which would prevent rain reaching the roots and inhibit the natural aeration of the soil. Advised by Frontier Forestry, the residents have removed the tarpaulin and are replacing it with bark chippings.

I am aware of similar concerns about artificial turf, which I suspect may have much the same properties as a layer of tarpaulin. In April, proposals on the Council's Planning Portal notified the intention to fell two dead beech trees in a garden on Whitehouse Terrace. Both are mature trees, the loss of which in such a short time is unlikely to be pure coincidence. A large area surrounding or close to the trees has been laid to low-maintenance artificial turf.

There are widely reported concerns that the process of installing artificial turf, or the conditions the turf creates, can in time cause the death of trees. Hard scientific evidence on this topic is not easy to find (the RHS is undertaking an on-line survey), but there are widespread views about harmful effects, and an equally strong view expressed by vested interests denying them.

Indeed, some commercial interests try to convince us that plastic turf does the trees good.

Factors that are likely to lead to the decline or death of trees having root systems covered by artificial turf include the following:

Ground preparation – the ground on which the turf is to be laid is often flattened and compressed and may be covered by ballast. This will affect its drainage

Temperature – there appears to be good evidence that artificial turf exposed to the sun can significantly raise the temperature of the soil beneath it

Soil Aeration - Artificial turf prevents the growth of any plant material that would normally aerate the soil

Soil Nutrients - It prevents the incorporation of any nutrient material.

Microorganisms -The soil microflora and other organisms (including mycorrhizal fungi) are likely to be affected. Wet anaerobic conditions may favour pathogenic fungi

Finally, from the website of Brodies LLP:

In a recent appeal (PPA-230-2162), City of Edinburgh Council's refusal of an application for retrospective planning permission for an area of artificial lawn (approximately 255 square metres in size) in the Grange Conservation Area has been upheld.

Peter Pitkin

Meadowside Health Physiotherapy and Massage

Your Health, Our Priority

Meadowside Health is a specialist physiotherapy clinic offering high-quality, compassionate care in a calm and supportive environment. We provide personalised treatment tailored to your individual needs.

- Physiotherapy
- Women's Health Physiotherapy
- Clinical Pilates
- Massage
- Counselling

- One-to-one appointments
- Evidence-based care
- Calm, private clinic space
- Specialist physiotherapy expertise

info@meadowsidehealth.co.uk
www.meadowsidehealth.co.uk
132 Marchmont Road, Edinburgh, EH9 1AQ
0131 563 3165

R&S MacDonald Ltd - Carpenters, Joiners, Builders

All kinds of work carried out by first class tradesmen.
50 years experience in the building trade. Please call 0131 662 0424 or 07583 877796 for free advice and estimates.
Doors and kitchens supplied and fitted.
Extensions and renovations architect also available.
Email: rsmacdonaldtd@yahoo.com All work guaranteed.

Planning Update

Check the planning guidance on our website to see whether you need permission to do work to your home or to lop any tree in the Grange: <https://grangeassociation.org/planning/>

Since the last newsletter, which included applications pending for 31 properties, there have been a further 19 applications and 30 decisions for planning and/or listed building consent in the Grange. We lodged comments on two of the new applications, after consulting members nearby. Members who live or stay near to the site of each application receive an email from us inviting comments. Join us if you wish to receive these emails. Major applications each have a thread on our web forum.

John Hossack is taking over duties progressively from Nigel Ayton, who largely composed this update. His experience has proven immensely valuable. The committee is looking to add one or two new interested members in the future. Email planning@grangeassociation.org for more information or to volunteer.

PLANNING APPLICATIONS and DECISIONS April - August 2026

Applications granted:
*# 27-31 Ratcliffe Terrace EH9 1SX	CLP for demolition. (However, this is now a listed building – no demolition allowed)
§ 10 Palmerston Road EH9 1TN	LBC to replace windows
19B Strathearn Road EH9 2AA	LBC for internal alterations to former mail sorting office
¶§ GF 18 Strathearn Road EH9 2AE	Heat pump and pipework
5A Hope Terrace EH9 2AP	Replace windows with uPVC
12 Hope Terrace EH9 2AP	Variation: Alter materials and steps for new entrance portico
¶ 31 Hope Terrace EH9 2AP	GF rear extension and garage conversion
§ 1 Blackford Road EH9 2DT	Remove garage; New entrance porch and greenhouse
¶§ 190 Grange Loan EH9 2DZ	LBC for double-glazing, replace cupola and under GF insulation
3 Grange Crescent EH9 2EH	GF rear extension
5 Lauder Road EH9 2EW	Replace windows with uPVC
§ 2 Oswald Road EH9 2HF	LBC to replace windows
§ 27-2 South Oswald Road EH9 2HH	LBC to replace windows
21A South Oswald Road EH9 2HQ	CLP for changes to entrance door and window
¶§ 5 Glenisla Gardens EH9 2HR	Garden room extension
§ 36 Dick Place EH9 2JB	Two new windows and GF en-suite
¶§ 61 Fountainhall Road EH9 2LH	Front garden landscaping; replace fence and gates
27 Fountainhall Road EH9 2LN	Replace windows
38 St Alban's Road EH9 2LU	Enlarge rear doors and windows
102 Relugas Road EH9 2LZ	Alter 1F kitchen window; Garden room to rear
24 Dalrymple Crescent EH9 2NX	2 x ASHP
Cat Clinic, 38 Blackford Avenue EH9 2PP	CLP for: Security shutter; replacement windows and doors
67 St Alban's Road EH9 2PQ	Replace GF rear utility room; family room extension
*# 91 St Alban's Road EH9 2PQ	Dormer extension to rear
¶# 37 West Relugas Road EH9 2PW	Rear GF extension (+ variation)
6 Relugas Place EH9 2PY	Variation: Alter boundary line
31 Canaan Lane EH10 4SX	12 PV panels to rear outshoot; ASHP

[illegible]

§ = Listed Building
= Outwith Grange conservation area
* = Comment or objection submitted by Grange Association
¶ = Application modified (as ~~strike through~~ text)
LBC = Listed Building Consent
CLP (CLE) = Certificate of Lawfulness Proposed (Existing)

(L)GF; 1F; 2F = (Lower) Ground Floor; 1st Floor; 2nd Floor
STL = Short-term let
ASHP = Air-Source Heat Pump
EVSE = Electric vehicle charging point
PBSA = Purpose-built student accommodation
PV = Solar photovoltaic

Grange Talks

October 2026 to March 2027

The programme for our winter season of talks is now finalised. We're delighted that we will continue to be able to use St Catherine's Argyle Church, Grange Road, this season and all the talks will take place there at 7.30pm on the third Tuesday of every month from October to March. Doors open at 7.00pm and tea, coffee and biscuits will be available. The talks are open to anyone who is interested in coming along. Entry is free to Grange Association members and it's £5 for everyone else. (There's an opportunity at the door to become a member if you wish.)

Programme

20 October 2026: The season opens with well-known science writer, Alan Walker. He will be talking about the most successful tree in the world, which happens to be the Scots Pine. His talk will cover its biological and commercial success and the impact the species has had across the globe.

17 November 2026: With a complete switch of focus, for which our seasons are renowned, Tom Wood, former Assistant Chief Constable of Lothian and Borders Police and now a successful writer, will talk about the little-known German bombing of Edinburgh and Leith in World War II.

15 December 2026: Kath Hay, who has previously given us a fascinating talk on the Honours of Scotland, will return to talk on this occasion about the Scots in Russia - charting those who, over several centuries, became key contributors to Russian life, art and society.

19 January 2027: We're delighted to welcome back another speaker, this time from last season. Adventurer and writer, James Ogilvie, will on this occasion tell us about his experience climbing the world's 7 highest mountains.

16 February 2027: With another abrupt shift in topic, Professor John Sawkins will give us a talk on Edinburgh's sewerage system! Entitled 'Saving Lives with Sewers', he will tell us about the history of our sewers and their massive public health impact.

16 March 2027: To conclude our season, we are delighted to welcome Helen Kay who will speak to us about Chrystal Macmillan, after whom one of the University of Edinburgh's buildings in George Square is named. As Helen will demonstrate, Chrystal Macmillan was an extraordinary figure of the early 20th-century Britain - a leading and powerful campaigner for peace, justice and women's equality.

Mark Batho

'Caring Exclusively for Cats'
Because cats deserve care designed specifically for them

Open Mon to Fri 8.30am to 6.30pm
Sat 9am to 12pm

Home visits now available for your cat's comfort

38 Blackford Avenue
Edinburgh
EH9 2PP

0131 466 7110
enquiries@catclinic.co.uk
www.catclinic.co.uk

Proudly Employee Owned and Independent

W BREMNER ROOFING

- Family run business for more than 25 years
- Free no obligation quotes
- From small roof repairs to complete renewals
- Slating
- Built-up felt roofing
- Lead and zinc work
- Rhones installed, repaired and cleaned
- Chimneys, cement work and harling

Tel: 0131 667 4594 | Mobile: 0797 1713855

Domestic & Commercial Roofing Contractor,
7 Ladysmith Road, Edinburgh EH9 3EX
Email: wb4roofing@btinternet.com Web: www.wbremner.co.uk

EVENTS / USEFUL CONTACTS

Leaf clearing 2026

Our majestic neighbourhood trees reward us, but also tax us with the sheer weight of their biomass when it falls to the ground in the Autumn. As with the pavements campaign featured on page 2, our concerns focus on safety rather than aesthetics. Wet leaves are a trip/slip hazard, as many of us know, some to our cost from sprains or worse.

As usual, then, the Grange Association will coordinate the collection of bags of leaves from the pavements and gutters of the Grange. It's also a great opportunity to clear the weeds and plants colonizing our edges.

This year the contact person is Grant Douglas. Please contact him for information on how to access bags and brushes and to arrange collection of filled bags by the Council. His email address is grantdouglas10@gmail.com

Alison Wood

Fiona Hastie - Self-employed
Mobile/Freelance Hairdresser
Hairdressing in your own home by Jenners trained stylist with many years' experience. For an appointment to suit, please call mobile 07932 763522 or email fionahastie@me.com

Babka
Open 7 days a week from 8.30 am.
"the best beignets in Edinburgh".
Artisan café/bakery between
Tollcross & the Meadows
20 Brougham Place,
EH3 9JU.
Tel 0131 228 6906
Sourdough bread freshly baked on site

THE GRANGE
Open Studios

Are you an artist or maker based in the Grange? Would you be interested in joining our next Open Studios? We are looking for new members and if you are interested please contact the founding members at:
deborah.cumming@btinternet.com

EDINBURGH
EAR CARE
NURSE LED MOBILE EAR WAX REMOVAL
07405 939951
www.edinburghhearcare.co.uk

Useful Contacts

MP for Edinburgh South: Ian Murray

Tel: 0131 662 4520 ian.murray.mp@parliament.uk

Office: 31 Minto Street, Edinburgh EH9 2BT

MSP for Edinburgh Southern: Daniel Johnson

Tel: 0131 541 2145 daniel.johnson.msp@parliament.scot

Office: 134 Comiston Road, Edinburgh EH10 5QN

Local councillors

Tel: 0131 200 2000

Email: Cllr.Firstname.Surname@edinburgh.gov.uk

Address: City of Edinburgh Council, City Chambers, High Street, Edinburgh EH1 1YJ

Southside/Newington

Steve Burgess

Pauline Flannery

Tim Pogson

Morningside

Marie-Clair Munro

Ben Parker

Neil Ross

Mandy Watt

Piccalilli. CHEESE & WINE BAR

Say Cheese...

Piccalilli is a cosy cheese and wine bar on the corner of Grange Loan. We work with local suppliers to bring you an exciting and ever changing selection of food and drink options to the heart of the Southside.

A carefully curated offering in a comfortable and friendly venue.

1 Grange Loan Edinburgh EH9 2NP | www.piccalilliedinburgh.co.uk
piccalilliedinburgh@gmail.com | insta: @piccalilli_edinburgh